

A Zen Story – Twice

By Kevin A. Sensenig
2017 December 22

A note.

I just came up with this, while taking a bath:

A friend says to Jack, "Why did you splash your face twice when you were done washing it?" Jack said, "Two." The friend, who was familiar with Jack's Zen, said, "Oh, two people standing." Jack said, "You can't splash yourself with two people. Left and right. One in opposites."

Fun! The no-form of the referent to form (and function).